Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 19 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Mild and breezy, with some outbreaks of rain overnight.

This Evening and Tonight:
Further outbreaks of rain at times this evening, especially across the Pennines. The rain will gradually ease overnight, although it will remain rather cloudy and damp for most. Winds will ease, but still on the breezy side. Staying mild. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Saturday:
A rather cloudy day with further spells of rain, heavy at times, especially across the Pennines. Remaining mild and windy, with a risk of gales on coasts and hills. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Sunday lighter winds, cloudy with outbreaks of rain gradually fading away. Monday dry but generally cloudy, with light winds. Tuesday windy with spells of rain. Average to mild temperatures.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.